

DEATHFISH AUDIOLOGS

by

Clei Barnhart

Boston Moreland

March 25, 2025

THIRD DRAFT

GAMEPLAY:

INT. FISHING SHACK - DAY

Graham lifts the fish he just fished up.

TRUE CRIME HOST

(looks like the fish is
talking, but sounds as if
from a radio)

The human experimentation took place discreetly, after the deckhands had been called to Headquarters on Europa.
They knew that MFC might fire them in response to their organizing, and that escape would be difficult, but they were not expecting to be outright kidnapped.

END:

GAMEPLAY:

INT. FISHING SHACK - DAY

Graham lifts the fish he just fished up.

TRUE CRIME HOST

(looks like the fish is
talking, but sounds as if
from a radio)

These workers occupied a variety of positions, from simple janitors to highly educated mechanics. MFC had always been proud of their fishing trawlers, as they genetically engineered massive hydrozoans to do the actual fishing, and fused them with standard fishing trawlers. Because of this, the workers needed only to steer the trawlers, process the fish, and keep everything in good condition.

END:

GAMEPLAY:

INT. FISHING SHACK - DAY

Graham lifts the fish he just fished up.

TRUE CRIME HOST

(looks like the fish is
talking, but sounds as if
from a radio)

One may think to worry about the impact of these disappearances on the families of the victims, but none of these people had families of their own. The pipe dream of having a family was what had kept them working so hard for so long. It was only a matter of time before they would get fed up at the impossibility of it all.

END:

GAMEPLAY:

INT. FISHING SHACK - DAY

Graham lifts the fish he just fished up.

TRUE CRIME HOST

(looks like the fish is
talking, but sounds as if
from a radio)

While alive but incapacitated, MFC scientists stabbed thick syringes into the workers' skulls, extracting their neurons via suction.

MFC conducted a variety of experiments with these fresh cells. Their ultimate project was to merge these human cells with those of the hydrozoan-trawlers, to remove any need for human workers in the future.

END:

GAMEPLAY:

INT. FISHING SHACK - DAY

Graham lifts the fish he just fished up.

TRUE CRIME HOST

(looks like the fish is
talking, but sounds as if
from a radio)

MFC successfully created a hybrid with the estimated intelligence of a seven year old. But it refused to follow even MFC's most basic instructions;
eventually, they went bankrupt.

When these deeds first came to light,
it seemed they would be hit with a variety of serious charges. But in the four years since, nothing has happened.

The whereabouts of the edited hydrozoan-trawler are currently unknown.

END: